Please join us for a conversation among international arbitration practitioners, arbitrators, and scholars, as they discuss some of the issues that appear in this year's Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot problem. The panel will offer real-world insights in international arbitration from both common law and civil law perspectives on considerations for excluding (or admitting) potentially protected and/or confidential evidence and the considerations that come into play in determining whether and why the CISG may apply to complex commercial transactions. The event will be of interest to anyone involved in navigating complicated evidentiary and applicable law issues in international disputes, in addition to students and coaches participating in this year's Vis.
